

A Foundation for the Future

Brian Bagdasarian

My Vision

Get The Job. Grow Your Career. Hire Anderson.

AnderTech is the largest professional club at Anderson. This is the foundation that powers the recruiting flywheel for future members. From providing a rigorous background in today's technology to expanding our alumni touchpoints and owning the job market in Los Angeles, every step I take is designed to create valuable experiences that lead to your desired outcome in the tech industry and beyond.

New Additions

Tech Foundations Series

The gift and curse of this industry is that it changes every day. My goal is not to make you into an expert in everything, but provide the foundational knowledge to appreciate, understand and engage with the complexity of deeply technical work. This series will start with the first principles of technology and connect to real product outcomes. Your ability to bridge business and technical concepts and willingness to learn will set you apart from other candidates in the industry and provide a platform for sustained success.

Process Improvement

Real Tech Experience

We are a tech organization; it's time to organize ourselves like one. I plan to introduce industry tools and techniques to create an authentic experience. When you join a tech company, you will already have real experience using tools like JIRA and GitHub and participating in sprint planning and standups. Our operations will become more structured, more efficient and more transparent, and our club will have the vital building blocks to create even more opportunities.

Community Growth

New Touchpoints

Our flywheel is only as good as the value we provide to our alumni. This starts with the new public face of AnderTech: our website. More than just an opportunity to get involved in a real software development project, building our community website will create a platform to engage with each other, share ideas and showcase AnderTech's talent with the world.

Los Angeles is the center of deep and entertainment technology, and AnderTech should own these recruiting markets. Anderson shouldn't just be an option when hiring MBA students, it should be the default. Our continued investment in learning, technology and community will drive success this year, and build an even better platform for future AnderTech members.

Our Ambitions

AnderTech is reaching the end of its startup phase. Join me in setting the foundation for the future. Los Angeles is my home, and the tech industry is my career. Building a community dedicated to these is my daily motivation. So, in addition to your curiosity, I ask for your ambitions - I want to know everything you want to learn, everything you want to try, everyone you want to meet - so this club can make them reality. I am humbled at the opportunity to earn this responsibility.

Thank You,

Brian Bagdasarian